THE KELLOGG SILVER-LEAD MINES. Since so many humbugs have been imposed on the people, they have become incredulous, and therefore view with suspicion and distrust every new scheme. Artifices and contrivances the current expenses go by default. The empty as the bubbles upon the sea. As governor was right. The third section soon as one humbug rots down another sprouts upon its grave. Occasionally, we hear of gold mines containing auriferous sands rich as those washed by Pactolus. Then we are told of the discovery of the land of diamonds, where the adventurer digs out a wheelbarrow load of sparkling jewels before breakfast. These humbugs have caused the public to look with distrust upon the exaggerated accounts of the Kellogg silver-lead mines in Arkansas. But we have put ourselves to some trouble to investigate the facts. and judging from the concurrent information obtained from disinterested sources, we have no hesitancy in saying neath the mighty hills and mountains, in a hay-stack," and almost as hard to finsl and follow, without the aid of sci-
